WE ♥ WHATCOM

The Whatcom County Executive's Office, in partnership with organizations and businesses across the county, has unveiled an image promoting an "I Love Whatcom" message. The image (featured below), developed by graphic designer Bradley Lockhart, features components which represent various aspects of Whatcom County-- a blueberry and raspberry representing modern agriculture as well as Oregon grape and thimbleberry, native plants which local tribes harvested for sustenance for many hundreds of years. The orca and salmon, prominently featured here, are not only sacred for the Nooksack and Lummi but also now endangered species which today we all are fighting to save. The mountains and trees, rain and sun, river and canoeist are also part of the essence of Whatcom. The image is available here for any person or organization to use free of charge.

SHOW US WHY YOU ♥ WHATCOM

Have you taken photos of your favorite spots in and around Whatcom County? We would love to feature them in an upcoming newsletter! Submit your photos to communityresources@oppco.org for consideration.
